SENSITIVE

Dear Mr Richard McLean

I refer to your emails to the Crime and Corruption Commission (CCC) on 9 and 10 February 2026. Having reviewed the emails we did not identify concerns that enliven the CCC's jurisdiction, and as such we will not be taking further action at this time.

It is noted that your correspondence is voluminous, sent to multiple recipients and does not clearly indicate you are wishing to submit a complaint of corruption with the CCC. If you are seeking to lodge a complaint with the CCC, please refer to the below information which outlines what matters we can deal with and provides options for how to lodge a complaint.

CCC's jurisdiction

We have authority to deal with corruption in:

- departments and statutory bodies
- the Queensland Police Service
- councils (local governments)
- universities
- courts, tribunals and boards, and
- prisons.

We can assess complaints about the alleged conduct of:

- public sector employees, including police officers and council employees
- any person whose conduct is believed to corrupt or affect the performance of a public agency, and
- state and local government politicians, but only when their conduct would, if proved, amount to a criminal offence.

We do not have authority to investigate:

- private sector matters, unless they arise out of dealings with the public sector
- departments or organisations in other states or territories
- federal parliamentarians, departments or agencies.

To be corrupt conduct, the behaviour you describe must meet three criteria:

- a. The person's actions as a public sector employee must have adversely affected the way in which they did their job or the way in which their agency did its job.
- b. In performing their duties as a public sector employee, the person has not acted honestly or impartially, or they have breached the trust placed in them OR they have misused confidential information available to them through their position.
- c. The conduct you have described to us must be either a criminal offence OR would be reasonable grounds for dismissing someone from their position.

The CCC can also deal with complaints about police misconduct. Police misconduct means conduct, other than corrupt conduct, of a police officer that:

- (a) is disgraceful, improper or unbecoming a police officer; or
- (b) shows unfitness to be or continue as a police officer; or
- (c) does not meet the standard of conduct the community reasonably expects of a police officer.

How to make a complaint

If you wish to lodge a complaint with the CCC regarding police misconduct or corrupt conduct in the Queensland public sector, you may submit it via the following methods:

1. Our online submission form located at <https://www.ccc.qld.gov.au/corruption/report-corruption>
2. Telephone: (07) 3360 6060
3. Email: complaints@ccc.qld.gov.au

Additional information about the CCC's jurisdiction or how to lodge a complaint can be found on our website (www.ccc.qld.gov.au).

Yours sincerely,

Lydia
