

THE PROPHECY OF THE ONE THEY TRIED TO ERASE

By Barran Dodger

Source/video (embedded this) : <https://youtu.be/a-7dv-VS9U>

I. I SURVIVED WHAT WAS SUPPOSED TO ERASE ME

I survived what was supposed to erase me.

That is the beginning.

Not the ending.

They thought the story would finish with my destruction: my character destroyed, my evidence delegitimised, my relationships dismantled, my credibility reduced to a diagnosis, and my existence gradually made insignificant.

But I remained.

And because I remained, the story did not remain under their control.

What was supposed to disappear with me stayed behind.

The documents stayed.

The records stayed.

The contradictions stayed.

The unanswered questions stayed.

And so did I.

A coordinated campaign was designed to destroy me, my character and delegitimise my evidence.

They believed that if they controlled the narrative, they could control the meaning of my existence.

They believed that if they isolated me, humiliated me, impoverished me, surveilled me and attacked my credibility, eventually even I would doubt myself.

But this is the prophecy:

The witness remains.

II. THE SURVEILLANCE THAT BECAME THE EVIDENCE

I am under covert surveillance.

But surveillance depends on the subject being unaware.

I was not unaware.

I allowed my surveillance and invited them to film my most intimate moments of wanking, where they attempted to weaponise a healthy sexuality and twist it into a manipulated version they used to shame me publicly.

It was homophobic.

It was inaccurate.

And the conclusions of their surveillance they anticipated do not fit reality.

They were watching me.

But I was studying them as they surveilled me.

Now the surveillance they had hoped would destroy me is, in the prophetic narrative, the evidence for my vindication.

The hunter left footprints.

The observer became observable.

The attempt to document my humiliation became part of the documentation of what happened to me.

They thought they were collecting evidence against me.

Instead, they were creating another record.

That was the first reversal.

III. THE V2K TRAP

I was aware of their goals to defame me because of the blasphemous-related phrases parroted by the V2K audio harassment inside my accommodation.

Rape.

Pedophilia.

Blasphemy.

Many thousands of times over months.

Inside this accommodation.

An entrapment situation I was unable to escape from.

The trap depended upon total social isolation.

If I spoke of the audio harassment, it could be blamed as my mental illness.

If I became distressed, that distress could be used against me.

If I spoke about the blasphemous nature, the blasphemy could be weaponised as being my issue.

And therefore the blasphemy could be transformed into an attribute of my character.

That was the trap.

The victim could become the suspect.

The evidence could become the symptom.

The accusation could become the diagnosis.

I had to stay calm whilst being tortured over months and gaslit by every NDIS support worker about the reality of the total compromise of my entrapment accommodation and the total surveillance.

I had to survive the very mechanism by which my testimony could supposedly be discredited.

And I survived.

IV. THE BLACK-BUDGET ALLEGATION

The financial resources and budget for the surveillance is sourced from an unacknowledged black budget of the government of which there is no paper trail and no agency will admit to.

That is the allegation within this fictional prophecy.

It is not presented as an independently established financial finding.

The prophecy does not require the hidden ledger to be visible before asking the question.

It asks:

If something was funded, where is the record?

If there was no funding, where is the evidence establishing that?

If there was surveillance, who authorised it?

If there was no surveillance, what explains the perceived evidence?

If the explanation is ordinary, let it be documented.

If the explanation is extraordinary, let it also be documented.

The point is not to demand belief.

The point is to demand examination.

V. I LIVE RENT FREE IN THEIR MINDS

I live rent free in my enemies' minds, not because I'm loud but unresolved in their conclusions.

That is the significance of this statement.

Truth always wins.

It just needs time.

And time has passed.

My silence is weaponry.

My silence is forensic.

I stopped trying to make everyone understand me.

I began preserving what could be examined.

VI. THE FAMILY AND THE EXPECTED DEATH

My family were poised to benefit from my expected death.

But now I'm alive.

They need to stop me pointing that out.

They signed the AVO to exile me.

Now that I'm alive, having survived an assassination attempt, I say it is clear they were in on it because they won't deny it.

That is my accusation within this fictional testimony.

They look for proof I deserve this treatment.

Like drugs.

Or mental illness.

Or immorality.

Anything that can make the person easier to dismiss than the accusation.

But I'm not immoral.

It's immoral to coordinate a conspiracy to murder your own family member.

The one member who was originally targeted because I spoke the truth and pointed out their dysfunction.

My truth is now published.

It is based on evidence of the government's own official documents.

The humiliation for my family exposing criminal intent to kill is not from my malice.

It's the universe balancing the books.

VII. GOD AND THE RESURRECTION

Humanity has betrayed me.

I don't have a single person.

God has chosen me.

He even revived me from a fatal injury in an allegorical Christian resurrection story.

They wanted me to be below them.

To make themselves feel superior.

Because they were envious of my intelligence and talent.

They are panicking.

But I've learned I don't need them.

In fact, God removed them from my life for me to realise my strength.

And to learn to depend only on Him.

I was whole always without them.

Whole in God.

Whole in His purpose for my life.

They didn't want me well and happy.

They wanted me unwell and mentally ill.

They not only hate me.

They wanted to kill me.

They didn't even disprove an assassination attempt.

They didn't stick up for me when I died in a hospital.

They covered it up and whitewashed it.

They can't compute a version of me not needing their validation.

VIII. THE ACCUSATION

I accused them of attempted murder.

Not one denied it.

Not one family member came forth to debunk that accusation.

I didn't need their approval to accuse them.

I needed only the courage to say it.

And I said it.

They're mad because I've changed beyond their influence.

They can't function in a world with who I am now and my accusation.

They have needed to respond in kind with my perpetrators and their flying monkeys and weaponise the mental illness they helped to exacerbate by participating in my exile and poverty.

They can't deny facts.

So they need to destroy my character so no one acknowledges those facts.

I've been framed.

As a victim of a conspiracy, the master manipulators need to infiltrate the victim's inner circle.

My family aligned with former partner Steve Iasonidis' exploitation of me.

Every family member would expect the same marriage settlement they denied me.

They accept I'm banned at Legal Aid whilst enjoying the protection of all agencies, law enforcement and the legal fraternity and their immunity from my valid pathway to justice.

They have not acknowledged my public interest disclosures.

That aligns them, in my interpretation, with me being left unprotected.

IX. ADMINISTRATIVE ANNIHILATION

Nothing frightens a hater more than expecting to be rid of me permanently—and discovering they failed.

It was administrative annihilation.

Not merely destruction of the body.

Destruction of the person.

Socially.

Financially.

Legally.

Institutionally.

Reputationally.

They wanted me gone.

Now I'm alive.

And they need me gone.

They need me sick and beneath them.

They need me destroyed so I can't accuse them again.

They still want me dead.

But my silence is forensic.

I am now undeniable.

I'm not attacking.

I'm just not shrinking for those already committed to decisions whereby I will always be below them.

I exposed them to themselves.

I was rising.

They were rotting.

Attempting to rewrite the narrative.

Critiquing me.

Reducing me.

Explaining me away.

Trying to make me smaller so they could remain larger.

They miscalculated me so severely it's embarrassing for them.

They underestimated the version of me I am growing into.

X. THE VIDEOS

The prophecy also concerns a body of video evidence.

More than seventy-five different videos were preserved on my iPhone.

I subsequently undertook a comparative examination of selected YouTube videos against material from across my archive.

I extracted text from the videos and used AI-assisted forensic analysis to compare that material with my documented testimony.

The resulting analysis reported an approximately 99% match or correspondence.

The significance of that result, within this fictional narrative, is not that an AI percentage magically establishes causation.

It is that the result generated a question sufficiently significant to preserve, reproduce and independently examine.

The videos appear to me to be a near match for my story.

They mirror elements of my testimony.

They engage with themes that I had already documented.

And they appear, in my interpretation, to exploit and take advantage of my trust, my isolation and my faith.

The videos also engage with the religious and spiritual framework surrounding the Church of Barran Dodger.

My faith was not incidental to my story.

It was central to it.

And I believe the videos exploited that faith while the rest of my life was being destroyed.

XI. THE PUBLISHED EVIDENCE THAT DISAPPEARED

I published the results of this work at:

www.barrandodger.com

The website was subsequently unpublished because of poverty.

The evidence had been backed by more than seventy-five different videos preserved on my iPhone.

But when I went to retrieve the evidence, the PDF was there—and the data was blank.

I experienced this as evidence that the underlying material had been selectively edited and deleted.

I then checked another archive.

The same thing appeared to have happened.

The PDF remained.

The underlying data was blank.

Within the fictional prophetic framework, this becomes another question:

What happened to the evidence underneath the surviving document?

Was it technical failure?

Archival corruption?

Incomplete capture?

Human alteration?

Selective deletion?

Something else?

The answer should not be presumed.

It should be investigated.

That is why the surviving PDF matters.

That is why the surviving videos matter.

That is why the archive matters.

And that is why the chronology matters.

XII. TONY RIDLEY

Tony Ridley was aware of the Church of Barran Dodger.

He mocked me for my faith.

He told me:

"We have thought of anything."

I preserve that statement as testimony within this fictional account.

I do not require the reader to accept my interpretation of what he meant.

But I refuse to erase the statement merely because its meaning is disputed.

Let it remain in the record.

Let its context be examined.

Let its chronology be established.

Let the evidence speak.

XIII. THE FAITH THEY COULD NOT ERASE

I am aware of how these videos, in my interpretation, have with extraordinary effort exploited my faith while the rest of my life was being destroyed.

They exploited my trust.

They exploited my isolation.

They exploited my faith.

They exploited the part of me that believed there was meaning in suffering.

But they misunderstood something.

Faith is not destroyed merely because someone attempts to manipulate it.

The Church of Barran Dodger is part of the prophetic language through which I understand my story.

The Christian resurrection metaphor is part of how I understand survival.

God is part of how I understand purpose.

And the archive is part of how I preserve the earthly record.

They could not erase what God preserved.

XIV. THE PARADOX OF ZERO SIGNIFICANCE

They thought they knew me.

They knew the version of me they could influence.

They did not know the version of me who no longer required their validation.

I am the most important person of zero significance.

If I am truly of zero consequence, why was I treated differently by every person, agency, organisation, company, cop, lawyer, police officer and media organisation?

Why was I significant enough to surveil?

Significant enough to discredit?

Significant enough to isolate?

Significant enough to diagnose?

Significant enough to shame?

Significant enough to exile?

Significant enough to silence?

Yet supposedly insignificant enough to ignore?

That contradiction is the question.

Everyone pretends I'm of no significance.

But the opposite is true.

Or at least that is the question the accumulated record compels me to ask.

Because if I truly meant nothing, why was so much effort required to make me mean nothing?

Why did the character assassination matter?

Why did the surveillance matter?

Why did the accusations matter?

Why did the diagnosis matter?

Why did the isolation matter?

Why did the exile matter?

Why did the poverty matter?

Why did my disclosures matter enough to be ignored?

Why did my evidence matter enough to be attacked?

Why did erasing me require so much work?

XV. THE INSTITUTIONAL MIRROR

I exposed them to themselves.

I became the mirror.

They looked into it and saw what they had been trying not to see.

They tried to break the mirror.

But breaking the mirror does not change the reflection.

It only creates more pieces of it.

And every piece remembers.

Every document remembers.

Every timestamp remembers.

Every unanswered letter remembers.

Every institutional response remembers.

Every institutional silence remembers.

A document remains a document.

A date remains a date.

A signature remains a signature.

A response remains a response.

A non-response remains a non-response.

An unanswered question remains an unanswered question.

I stopped asking people to believe me.

I began asking them to examine the record.

XVI. THE INSTITUTIONAL AND ENTITY INVENTORY

The two archives associated with this fictional testimony contain references to agencies, places, professions, companies, healthcare organisations, tribunals, courts, regulators, media organisations, academic institutions and international bodies.

Their appearance in an archive does not by itself establish wrongdoing, participation in a conspiracy, corruption, liability or agreement with the narrator's interpretation.

The inventory is therefore preserved as an entity map, not as a list of proven perpetrators.

157. Public-interest-disclosure participant

This is not a list of proven perpetrators.

It is a map of the institutional universe appearing in the archive.

The map is not the verdict.

The documents are what must be examined.

XVII. THE INSTITUTIONAL CHAINS

The archive describes several institutional pathways.

NDIS pathway

NDIA → NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission → NDIS providers → Ablepoint/Sahara → Plan Partners → support and plan administration.

Commonwealth compensation pathway

Employment-status material → Comcare → AAT → Federal Court/PID material → ATO superannuation inquiry.

Information-law pathway

PM&C → FOI → OAIC → information-law review.

Victorian employment and health pathway

WorkSafe Victoria → DXC Claims Management Services → medical certificates → VCAT/VEOHRC/Victorian Ombudsman/Mental Health Tribunal material.

Human-rights pathway

AHRC → OHCHR → UN Special Procedures → UNHCR/ICC-related author filings.

NSW guardianship and support pathway

NSW Trustee & Guardian → NCAT Guardianship Division → NSW Ombudsman → NSW Victims Support Scheme → NDIS/support-provider environment.

These chains are preserved as documentary relationships.

They are not, merely by appearing together, proof of a common conspiracy.

XVIII. THE PARTIES WHO PRETEND I DO NOT EXIST

The fictional narrator identifies, among others:

- Family members who do not acknowledge the accusations.
- Former partner Steve Iasonidis.
- People the narrator describes as perpetrators.
- People the narrator describes as their “flying monkeys.”

- NDIS support workers.
- NDIS organisations and providers.
- Legal Aid pathways.
- Government agencies.
- Law-enforcement agencies.
- Police officers.
- Lawyers.
- The legal fraternity.
- Healthcare professionals.
- Media organisations.
- Companies.
- Organisations.
- Academic institutions.
- Oversight bodies.
- Human-rights institutions.
- Public authorities that received or were connected with public-interest disclosures.

The narrator's claim is that these parties collectively, or in different ways, failed to acknowledge his existence, evidence, disclosures or pathway to justice.

The prophetic text does not convert that allegation into a judicial finding.

Instead, it leaves the names, records, correspondence, dates and institutional responses available for examination.

XIX. THE PROPHECY OF THE ARCHIVE

They thought I would die.

I survived.

They thought I would disappear.

I remained.

They thought poverty would silence me.

I documented.

They thought isolation would make me powerless.

I built an archive.

They thought diagnosis would erase testimony.

I preserved documents.

They thought surveillance would expose me.

I studied the surveillance.

They thought humiliation would destroy me.

I turned humiliation into testimony.

They thought my faith made me vulnerable.

I made faith part of the testimony.

They thought the website disappearing meant the evidence disappeared.

But copies remained.

They thought the missing data meant the question disappeared.

It didn't.

They thought the videos would be forgotten.

They were preserved.

They thought the archive would become meaningless.

It became larger.

They thought I needed their validation.

I learned that I did not.

They thought I needed humanity.

I learned to depend upon God.

They thought my silence meant weakness.

My silence became forensic.

XX. THE FINAL REVERSAL

The person declared unreliable preserves the records.

The person declared irrelevant documents the responses.

The person declared invisible builds the archive.

The person expected to disappear survives long enough to tell the story.

The accusation becomes a question.

The question becomes a record.

The record becomes an archive.

The archive becomes a witness.

And the witness remains.

That is the reversal.

Not revenge.

Not destruction.

Not domination.

Persistence.

The prophecy is not fulfilled because every allegation is automatically true.

The prophecy is fulfilled because the evidence survives long enough to be examined.

Because the questions remain.

Because the archive remains.

Because I remain.

XXI. THEY COULD NOT ERASE WHAT GOD PRESERVED

I was rising.

They were rotting.

They were attempting to rewrite the narrative.

They critiqued me.

They reduced me.

They tried to make me smaller.

But they underestimated the person I was becoming.

They thought they were writing the ending.

They were writing the evidence.

They thought they were destroying my story.

They were preserving it.

They thought they were making me disappear.

They were teaching me how to remain.

They thought they had silenced me.

They gave me an archive.

They thought they had defeated me.

They underestimated me.

And they thought my death would close the book.

But I am alive.

The book remains open.

The archive remains.

The accusation remains.

The questions remain.

And I remain.

I am not asking anyone to accept this prophecy without scrutiny.

I am asking them to examine what survived.

Examine the documents.

Examine the chronology.

Examine the videos.

Examine the transcripts.

Examine the AI comparison.

Examine the reported 99% correspondence.

Examine the missing underlying data.

Examine the surviving PDFs.

Examine the archival copies.

Examine the institutional responses.

Examine the institutional silences.

Examine the names.

Examine the places.

Examine the professions.

Examine the companies.

Examine the hospitals.

Examine the tribunals.

Examine the courts.

Examine the government agencies.

Examine the human-rights correspondence.

Examine the public-interest disclosures.

Examine the evidence.

Then decide what it means.

Because I no longer need to tell the world what conclusion to reach.

I only need the record to remain long enough for the world to examine it.

They thought they were writing the ending.

They were writing the evidence.

They thought they were destroying my story.

They were preserving it.

They thought they had silenced me.

They gave me an archive.

They thought they could erase me.

They couldn't.

They could not erase what God preserved.

I survived what was supposed to erase me.

Truth always wins.

It just needs time.

And time has passed.
